Speakers

Dan Lantz, COO, Green by Nature
EPR - Green by Nature processes all the Blue Box materials from BC's Blue Box program.

British Columbia has North America's first full producer responsibility (EPR) program for the Blue Box. How is it working? What can we learn from it? Do we want it to be applied in other provinces? What are the implications for the paper industry?

Dennis Colley, President, Fibre Box Association - The FBA represents the US corrugated box industry.

The EPR approach has been applied to tires, paint, and electronics in the US but not to any Blue Box programs as yet. What is the status of the EPR debate in the US and what are the implications for the paper industry?

Robert Chant, Senior VP Corporate Affairs and Communication, Loblaw - Bob represents Canada's major grocery retailer on several producer-related bodies, including the industry-funding organisation for Ontario's Blue Box program, Stewardship Ontario.

What's the retailer perspective on EPR in Canada? How are they handling the conflicting demands and range of programs across the country? What do they see as the key decisions to be made going forward? What are the implications for the paper industry?

Glen Murray, Minister of the Environment and Climate Change (ON) - The minister has promised to introduce new waste reduction and resource recovery legislation to Ontario this year. This will impact all waste streams and recycling in the province.

Come hear the minister explain the major thrust and intentions of the new legislation.
